

The noise level among passengers with electronic devices that require headsets is high, because sometimes they are not used and they think the noise does not travel far. On an aircraft, the noise levels travel longer distances. It is difficult enough trying to board an aircraft and receive compliance for on time departures as it is. I can not imagine an aircraft full of passengers talking on cell phones. The risk of terrorists communicating among themselves is the only reason needed.